RedEye, Chicago Tribune staff reports

Returning for its 11th year at Grant Park, Lollapalooza welcomed an estimated 300,000 people to Grant Park over a steamy—and briefly rainy—weekend.

The city's largest music fest kicked off to 80-plus degree temperatures on Friday, which featured headliners Paul McCartney and The Weeknd.

Saturday's headliners included Metallica and Sam Smith, but Texas rapper Travis Scott made a different kind of headline when he was arrested and charged with disorderly conduct after encouraging fans to jump barricades during his show, according to Melissa Stratton, spokeswoman for the city's Office of Emergency Management and Communications. Twenty-five concertgoers were arrested during the first two days of Lolla, Stratton said.

On Sunday, hours before headliners Florence and the Machine and Bassnectar were to take the stage, Grant Park was temporarily evacuated around 2:30 p.m. as a storm cell coming from the west bore down on the city. Though parts of the Chicago area experienced high winds and hail, the storm did not hit downtown that hard, and the festival reopened at 3:30 p.m., with acts starting up again at 4 p.m. To accommodate the delay, Lollapalooza released an updated schedule that pushed the closing time of the festival from 10 p.m. to 10:45 p.m.

Yep, I took my dad to Lolla

Elise De Los Santos

If you had told me in 2009 that one of these vears I would be taking one of my parents to Lollapalooza, I would have laughed you out of Grant Park.

Fast forward seven fests later, and that's exactly how I found myself on Friday: in Grant Park, at Lollapalooza, with my dad.

It wasn't supposed to be that way. Last year, my sister and I had sworn off Lolla forever while we sat on a couple of WXRT adirondacks in the pouring rain. Never again, we said. We were getting too old for the flower crownwearing crowd anyway.

But come March, the lure of seeing a living legend in concert proved too strong for me. So my sister and I sat in front of two laptops and an iPad, waiting to snag one-day tickets to see Paul McCartney. After an agonizing few minutes in wait-screen limbo, my sister got through, and, $220 poorer, we were headed back for another round of roughing it in the wilds of downtown Chicago, just us two against the hordes of CamelBak-ed bros and crop top-wearing you-knows.

Then my sister got a free three-day pass, courtesy of the city's ThinkChicago program.

We were already planning to sell our extra wristband when her boyfriend made a mindblowing suggestion: Why not ask if our dad wanted to go?

Our dad? Come with us to Lolla? But ... but ... The objections stopped there. There were no buts. He wasn't working that day. We wouldn't have to figure out how to sell the ticket. Paul [bleep]ing McCartney was headlining. It was quite perfect, actually. Why hadn't we thought of our dad?

Because he's our dad. Lolla has been criticized in recent years for becoming too mainstream, booking already-big pop acts guaranteed to bring the crowds instead of the alt and indie acts that would be next year's rock stars. Surely the fact that we were considering bringing our dad to Lolla was the last straw, the absolute end of the music fest's coolness factor.

I suppose I should be old enough to know by now that something doesn't become un-cool just because your parent is there.

With my dad in tow, the novelty returned to Lollapalooza. After scaring him with stories about fights breaking out, rampant drug use and Grant Park turning into a mudbath (two of which we knew weren't going to happen on a sunny day starring Paul McCartney), my sister told him exactly what to wear, and then we were off. We hit up the freebie tents before the good acts started, took photos near the Lollapalooza sign and Buckingham Fountain and-my sister's specialty-worked our way to the front row without being assholes about it.

And so the three of us leaned on the metal barricades to watch St. Paul and the Broken Bones, Alabama Shakes and, of course, Sir Paul McCartney. In that way, it wasn't much different than shows of Lolla past: being slowly roasted alive in 90-degree weather, soaking in the sun and good music with about 100,000 other people—only this time, one of those 100,000 was my dad.

Funny how the eager 57-year-old music-fest rookie could infuse new life into the event for the jaded 25-year-old Lolla vet. But hearing my dad sing along with Sir Paul was enough to ... well, I'm in danger of becoming as sentimental as my dad was when he turned to us a few minutes before McCartney came on and thanked us sincerely for taking him to Lolla, so I'll just say that, given the choice between standing all night next to a sweaty, CamelBak-ed bro or my dad, I now know for sure I'll pick my dad. Every time.

e only have one pair of shoes—dancing shoes—which means they certainly aren't reserved for weekends only. Said shoes sent us questing after places to boogie down every night of the work week (after all, one person's Monday is another's Saturday). What we found were five parties, recurring Sunday through Thursday. Allow us to give you a peek inside and introduce you to the crowds at each. Check back on Page 3 through Friday for what's happening each night. Lace up, we're going dancing.

Porn and Chicken
Evil Olive
1551 W. Division St.
773-396-4904
$10 cover after 11 p.m.

Porn and Chicken is advertised as a "safe haven for all things lewd and crude, lascivious and licentious." What is it? It's five-year-running Monday night dance party at Evil Olive that never fails to live up to its name—yes, there's actually chicken (for those who show up early) and porn for everyone broadcast on screens throughout the bar. It's like a watered-down version of a New York Club Kids party of the early '90s with EDM music. There are people in chicken suits pouring shots into the mouths of the willing and half-naked dancers on bars; there might be a SpongeBob costume, and there's always a theme (think "Jurassic World" or Christmas in June). It's an intelligently curated voyeuristic atmosphere. Surrounded by porn in every direction, you might assume everyone's eyes are fixated on the walls. But there's too much spectacle. The crowd is busy checking one another out as the DJ, on a platform overlooking the crowd, delivers high-energy electronic jams under purple lights. Across the board, partygoers say it's a freeing environment to be yourself. Oh, and there's a no-phones-out policy, so you might be more apt to see a nipple. Fair warning: You aren't entirely safe from cameras. Porn and Chicken's photographers are walking around documenting the madness. But for the most part, it's a menagerie, and what happens there stays there.

STRANGERS IN THE NIGHT

David Hill and Camila Forero ran the back room at Evil Olive for a good 20-minute dance sesh. Hill, 33, a DJ, was breaking it down on his own before Forero joined him. Dancing is what's kept him out of trouble, he said, and Porn and Chicken is a place where you can just "be you." "When I'm dancing, I don't see people around me, I'm just dancing," he added. Hill has been going to the party since the early days, when it was first put on at the former Lakeview bar Risque Cafe in 2010 (years after Twisted Spoke, also formerly in Lakeview, debuted its similar weekly Smut & Eggs). The first time he went, he waited in line for an hour and didn't know what to expect. "When I got in, I was like, 'What the hell is this?' " he said. "But once I realized what I was seeing and how much fun it was, it was absolutely the best." He likes the diversity and said it's a place where people of all backgrounds can come together without fights breaking out. "You got rocker kids, goth kids, the girly girls, your guys with footwork, like me," he said. "You got so many different cliques, it's like an insane high school."

Forero, 26, is also a longtime frequenter, and her dancing days go back even further. When she was 3, her grandmother lost sight of her at a festival and found her dancing on stage with the band. She still has no trouble busting a move with strangers. She met Hill at Evil Olive that night in the back room, where a second DJ spins laid-back house beats. "That moment David and I created out of nowhere, we ended up kind of demanding everyone's attention unknowingly because we got so lost in dancing together," she said. "All of a sudden, when I happened to look up, the entire room was watching us dance, and the music was so great I didn't want to stop dancing." They didn't catch each other's names that night.

THE PARTY ANIMAL

Jillian Shallow and a guy in an Elmo suit shared an intimate moment as she snuggled up to him. It's not a sight you see many other places, but that's just a glimpse of the curiosities within. Shallow, 25, works weekends as a cocktail waitress, so she likes that there's a crazy place to hang out with her other industry friends on her weeknights off. "It's a little fantasy. You get away on a Monday night," she said. "When most people are taking it easy and recovering, there are people going out and getting wild 'cause it's their weekend." She considers herself a regular now, but she wasn't initially drawn to the concept her first time there a few years ago. She was a bit creeped out by the porn, but she said she appreciates it now, especially when it matches the theme: "They do have some throwback gems," Shallow said. "It is interesting to see how porn has evolved." Nudity inside the club isn't uncommon either, but Shallow is comfortable with it. She admitted it's not for everyone, though. A friend told her recently she didn't want to go there anymore because there are "too many freaks." "I guess there are people who go and let their freak flag fly, which I think that's awesome to go to a place and feel free enough to get on the bar and take your top off or the guy going around in the chicken suit handing out shots," she said. "Why not go somewhere where you're going to see some chick standing on the bar grinding a [saw] on her crotch with the sparks?"

THE GRINDER GIRL

Sparks flew as performance artist Ammunition smashed an angle grinder against a custom-made belt of steel sheet metal and rubber tarmac. What does it feel like? "Like an orgasm," she laughed. "Let's leave it at that."

WHY YINZ SHOULD TAKE CUBS-PIRATES SERIOUSLY

Growing up outside Philadelphia, I knew I had cousins from the other side of the state. I knew they probably weren't Phillies fans, like I was. And neighbors told me people out there spoke differently. Boy, were they right.

The word "yinz" is practically synonymous with Pittsburgh; it's that city's collective form of "you." "Yinz goin' ta the game?" Of course you are.

But yinz is more than just some word plopped into conversation. It is an identifier of the Steel City's uniqueness and unity in

This week, as the Cubs head east to play the Pirates, traveling fans get lots of yinzer pride to come out. Both the Cubs and the Pirates are gunning for an NL wild card, and every game counts.

In 1994, when the Pirates moved into the NL Central, Pittsburgh became—perhaps against its will-a de facto part of Midwest

"But Pittsburgh isn't in the Midwest!" its residents will tell you. It's rocky and hilly, not flat. And there's no "prairie weather," like that rain-while-it's-sunny-out shtick that happens in Chicago. Sure, there is tension in the air, but it ain't about geography.

Crowded into the same fold as perennial powerhouse St. Louis, occasionally good Cincinnati and Milwaukee, and our beloved Cubs, Pittsburgh has battled to get to the postseason ever since it joined the NL Central. It wasn't always that way.

Long ago in the 1960s and '70s Pirates baseball was king, as future Hall of Famers such as Roberto Clemente, Bill Mazeroski and Willie Stargell played their entire careers with Pittsburgh and often dominated op-

They won titles, too. Pittsburgh won the World Series in 1960, 1971 and 1979 but hasn't gotten close since. Also interesting is that the Cubs and the Pirates share a departure point in baseball's grand timeline.

As all Cubs fans know, 1908 was the last time the North Siders won a World Series, and it was the next season that Pittsburgh won its first. But the Bucs haven't clinched a division title since their pre-NL Central days.

In the mix, both teams' fans have experienced the same ups and downs. Thirst for a championship permeates both cities, regardless of the talent stacked elsewhere throughout the National League.

Moreover, these two cities have more in common, then and now, than yinz, er, you might think.

ANDY FRYE IS A REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.

Yankees, whom they beat in the World Series. A new era of optimism begins.

Another title

After MLB introduces league playoffs in 1969, the Pirates punch their ticket six of the next 10 seasons, led by Clemente, Mazeroski and Stargell. In 1979, they sweep Cincinnati in the NLCS and beat Baltimore to win their fifth world title.

Downer decades

After three successive trips to the NLCS from 1990-92. Pirates fans endure 20 seasons under .500 as the Bucs miss the postseason until 2013.

Powerhouses again?

Things turn around in 2013 as Pittsburgh wins 94 games before beating Cincinnati in the NL Wild Card Game. In 2014, they repeat their wild card trip but lose to San Francisco.

Today, the Pirates are in a 2015 wild card battle with the Cubs. As for the Cubs. they haven't tasted postseason baseball since 2008. Until this year ... ? -A.F.

Ronda Rousey (right) fights Brazil's Bethe Correia during their MMA bantamweight title fight on Saturday. Rousey knocked Correia out 34 seconds into the first round to win. AP

Rousey-Tate, part 3? So be it, champ says

By Lance Pugmire | LOS ANGELES TIMES

Ronda Rousey's continued dominance of women's mixed martial arts begs for someone to bring a stiffer challenge, and the next to try—for a third time—is expected to be Miesha Tate.

Rousey (12-0) has already beaten Tate twice, but after the UFC women's bantamweight champion needed just 34 seconds to knock out previously unbeaten Brazilian Bethe Correia on Saturday, Tate (17-5) is the most qualified 135-pounder.

UFC Chairman Lorenzo Fertitta confirmed late Saturday that he is seeking to place Rousey-Tate together with Aldo-McGregor on a card that would be expected to shatter UFC live-gate and pay-per-view records.

Rousey said in her post-fight television interview that she "was willing to go longer" with Correia.

But that wasn't to be, as Correia wilted with clean right and hard left-handed punches to the face, followed by a knee to the body and a decisive short punch to the temple that sent her crumpling headfirst to the canvas.

Rousey has needed just 64 seconds to finish her last three opponents, and II of her I2 fights haven't gone past the first round. Tate took her to the third round in 2013.

"I feel it's a challenge. I want to silence every criticism one at a time, and I think I silenced one tonight," Rousey said.

While the UFC retains the rights to a possible Rousey challenger, Cris "Cyborg" Justino, UFC president Dana White repeated Saturday that he wants Justino to fight once at 135 pounds before he matches her against Rousey.

"I prefer who makes weight and doesn't do drugs," Rousey said Saturday. "The fight's there for Cyborg. She can make 145 pumped full of steroids. She can move down to 135 without 'em. I'm not going anywhere."

Justino tested positive for performance-enhancing drugs in 2011.

So Tate, after a convincing victory in Chicago over Jessica Eye on July 25, beckons.

"That's what the fans want to see, she's the No. I contender," Rousey said. "She's going to get beat again, but ... beating up Miesha seems to be good for both of our careers, so why not do it again?"

horoscopes

Leo July 23-Aug. 22 You may continue to struggle with not feeling your most valued in terms of relationships this week.

Fortunately, by the weekend, you'll finally have had enough of this self-pity party and will be ready to be more proactive to change whatever's keeping you feeling so stuck in the mud.

Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22 A breakthrough is possible this week if you and your partner have been participating in couples counseling.

Although it might be uncomfortable to reach. it's certainly within your grasp-as long as you're both willing to work for it. After Friday, communication becomes easier.

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23 You might convince yourself that it's a good idea to mix friendship and sex, but before you make a move you might later regret, carefully consider what you're getting yourself into. A temporary boost in confidence might quickly lead to a major loss of self-respect by mid-week.

Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 21 Matters of the heart might be a real struggle this week if you're not feeling a real sense of admiration for your partner. If the relationship has gone stale and you no longer feel the same level of respect for your mate that you used to, you have to be honest about it.

Sagittarius Nov. 22-Dec. 21 If you're struggling with a career decision, or what to say to your boss or business partner in an upcoming meeting, you may want to enlist the advice of your mate. In fact, after Friday it appears that communicating with your partner about career matters and life goals will be quite supported.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19 You and your partner might go back and forth in an effort to solve a joint financial problem or a disagreement about how to budget and invest money together. While you might feel as if you have to temporarily sacrifice funding one of your personal goals, this week you two can truly make progress.

Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 18 Pay attention to seemingly small developments between you and your partner this week. On Thursday, it's possible that you'll revisit a conversation about a topic you were never able to agree on in the past. Now, it'll be possible for you two to take a different approach to make this situation right.

Pisces Feb. 19-March 20 f single, it's possible that you'll meet someone Thursday who has a background that is unique from yours in some way. These differences won't be a deal breaker. You'll feel familiarity along with the originality of this person, and that will make you feel safe enough to explore potential.

Taurus April 20-May 20 You might feel that you have no other option but to have your personal relationship continue to suffer in order to take care of what you need to at home. In reality, it appears that you're afraid to do the work necessary to make the relationship a priority. If that's the case, you run the risk of losing it altogether.

Gemini May 21-June 21 Heavy work commitments might really throw a wet blanket over your love life this week. You might resent having to prioritize work over romance, but the good news is that your partner will be more understanding than you expect.

Cancer June 22-July 22 Make the most of the final days of Mars trekking through your sign. On Thursday, when Mars is at a perfect angle to Saturn (now in your true love sector), it's possible that you'll feel more confident than ever to take a chance on building a new romantic foundation with someone special. Go for it!

WE ARE HERE TO HELP! NOT JUDGE!

It's happening

The Internet lied last week. Imagine that. Channing Tatum has officially signed on to star in "Gambit," according to ew.com. after rumors swirled last week that the project was falling apart and Tatum wasn't going to sign on. Lies! The movie, set to be released in October 2016, follows Gambit. a mutant human who is part of the X-Men and can control and manipulate kinetic energy. Oh, he's also a skilled card-thrower. Tatum once told MTV, 'Gambit's the only X-Man Lever loved. He's the most un-X-Man X-Man that's ever been an X-Man. ... He loves women and drinkin' and smokin'," according to ew.com. Sweet.

THE QUOTE

"The fans have been so loyal for more than 25 years. We still have new fans for the original show, because it's never been off the air in syndication. So we would never want to bring this spinoff show and turn it into something the fans aren't going to expect."

-Candace Cameron Bure, aka D.J., to Vulture, on the "Full House" spinoff "Fuller House." The Netflix show will follow a storyline similar to the original's: a single parent raising kids. Bure said fans can still expect a wholesome show, according to vulture.com.

Dr. Dre is back

For the first time in 15 years, Dr. Dre will release a new album. That's right. The album, "Compton: A Soundtrack," will be released with the N.W.A. biopic "Straight Outta Compton," according to vulture.com. Dre told the audience during his Beats 1 radio show, "I was leaving the set, coming to the studio, and I felt myself just being so inspired by the movie that I started recording an album. And I kept it under wraps. And the album is finished."

Who ya gonna call?

Seriously, always call the Ghostbusters. When a few kids at Tufts Medical Center in Boston put a sign in the windows that said, "Who ya gonna call?", the Ghostbusters actually showed up. The reboot film, starring Melissa McCarthy, Kristen Wilg. Kate McKinnon and Leslie Janes, is filming in Boston, and the leading ladies decided to make a visit to the hospital after seeing the sign, according to contine. com. Dressed in character, the group did impromptu checks under beds and mock scans for any ghosts. We can't get enough of this foursome. Seriously.
